Narrow Escape.

It is an old and comforting saying that a special providence protects children in time of imminent danger. A thrilling incident occurred on last Tuesday afternoon which verified the old adage. Mrs. E. C. Holden being about to leave her residence to make some calls looked around for her three-year-old little girl to accompany her. She was nowhere to be seen, and repeated and loud calls for "Frankie" brought back no answer. After instituting a vain search in the houses of several of her neighbors Mrs. H. Russell, who informed her that she had seen two little girls on the side of the hill west of Meyers' brewery, where excavations had been made for filling up lots. Hastening thither the feelings of the mother may be better imagined than described when she discovered her darling and little Nellie Mitchell, a neighbor's child only a year older, unconscious of danger, gathering flowers on the brink of a precipice from which a single false step or giving way of the treacherous soil, undermined as it was beneath their little feet, might hurl them down to the rocks fifty or sixty feet below where they stood. Seeing her mother, little Frankie held out her arms and in so doing nearly lost her balance and would have fallen had not Nellie providentially caught hold of her dress and pulled her back. Almost paralyzed with terror Mrs. H. knew not what to do. The narrow ledge on which the children stood afforded them no room to turn and retrace their steps without great danger of falling. The children apparently now realized this and began to cry. Recovering her presence of mind Mrs. H. calmly told the children to sit down if they could and she would come and get them. The little ones obeyed, and hastening to Mr. Meyers' brewery the anxious mother called Fred, one of Mr. M's men, to her assistance. When he saw the perilous position of the children he was as much alarmed for their safety as Mrs. H. It seemed almost impossible for any one to reach them and give them aid. By dint of great caution, however, and literally crawling along the hillside, Fred did manage to reach the little climbers and finally succeeded in rescuing both from their extremely dangerous position. The side of the hill below where the children stood has been made almost perpendicular by excavations, and as nothing could have broken their fall, certain death would almost inevitably have resulted.

—A party consisting of Lyman Kinney, Frank Ward, and N. D. Raymond have returned from Coal creek, near the mouth of the Nehalem, where they report finding another good vein of coal.

—A scarcity of suitable white help is at present experienced in this place. One gentleman informed us yesterday he'd been "all over town," looking for a girl to do kitchen work, but unsuccessfully.

—Charters & Morton, of the Astoria Shooting Gallery, offer a standing prize of $2.50 to any person making three bullseyes in succession. Also a prize of $5.00 to any person making the highest score in six shots during the balance of the week.

—Complaints have been made to us by two or three subscribers that their papers are not received. Mr. Selig is positive that he delivers them, so the only conclusion we can arrive at is that they are stolen. Now while we are glad to have our literary labors appreciated, even by geniuses of a speculative turn of mind, we decidedly object to such procedure. If the thing isn't stopped we shall be obliged to take proper measures to have it stopped.

—Gov. Thayer has recently issued the following commutations: Wm. Schaefer, sentenced from Marion county on March 1, 1879, for three years, for larceny. Sentence, according to commutation, expired on September 30th; reason, extra services and term of sentence nearly expired. John Latham, sentenced from Wasco county on December 22, 1879, for two years' imprisonment, for larceny. Sentence expired, according to commutation, on October 1, 1881; reason, extra services and term of sentence nearly expired.

—The Kentucky Jubilee singers, who will appear here to-night and Friday evening, 13th and 14th, come highly recommended by the press. We clip the following from the Oregonian: The Kentucky Jubilee Singers appeared again last evening. They have a number of fine artists. The truth is they give a splendid and enjoyable entertainment. The troupe numbers eleven people. No one should fail to witness them in their jubilee choruses, songs, dances, sketches, etc.

Miss Maggie Webb, who is known as the colored nightingale, is with this combination. Miss Webb is an artist of a very high order and possesses a rich soprano voice. All the other members are stars, several of whom have been with the combination since its organization, eight years ago, and have played in all the cities throughout the United States and Canada. Reserved seats without extra charge may be obtained at Carl Adler's.
